

The Knights Who Kneel, Chapter 1

One day Sam and Mom went to buy some things for their home. They liked to shop together. While they were at the store, Sam saw some books. He saw two different books he thought he would like, but he did not have any money. "Mom, would you please buy these books for me?" asked Sam. "I will buy one of them," answered Mom. "Which one looks better to you?" "I would probably like this one the best," said Sam. "It would be fun to learn about knights. But this is a chapter book and it might be too hard for me to read." "You and your dad can read it together," said Mom. That night, when Dad got home from work, Sam got out his new book. "Look at the new book Mom bought for me. Will you please read it to me? It is not very easy to read." Sam asked Dad. "Sure," said Dad. "But it is almost time for bed, so you should get ready for bed first. After you are ready for bed, I will come in your room and read the book to you."

I am glad Mom bought this for you." Sam got ready and got in bed. Dad came in. He said, "Let's start. We will see how much we can read in one night." "Do you think I will learn about knights?" asked Sam. "I am not sure. You will probably learn a little bit about knights. But, it does not look like there are very many facts. I still think it will be fun to read." Dad started reading to Sam.
